Dear Madam:

Part of the requirements, for a Master's degree at Cornell University, is a thesis. I have chosen as my subject "To Discover the Factors to be Considered in Making a Program of Vocational Education in Agriculture for the Van Hornesville Community by a Study of the Human Resources of the Central School Area".

I am the instructor in Vocational Agriculture of that school, and have been there since the department was started in 1932.

Your book "Owen D. Young, A New Type of Industrial Leader," has been of much interest and inspiration to me. You deal so excellently with the history, background and his early life, which are the factors, I desire to use in explanation of the present situation. May I have permission to use some of these facts as part of my thesis?

Trusting that I may have this privilege. I am

Very truly yours,

H. O. Bander

After August 17th my address will be
Van Hornesville, N.Y.
