

St. Denis Hotel.
Broadway, and Eleventh Street.

New York Oct. 2, 1896

Dear Miss Tarbell

I have been here for a few days and had the misfortune of missing you. I am leaving tomorrow early for Europe so I must bid you good-bye by letter, and express the hope to see you as soon as possible in Europe.

I wished to ask you whether you have found something in your notes about Lincoln & the Convention system & the Debate at Vandalia. But I am afraid that I will not be able to follow your suggestions owing to the scarcity of the American collections in the Paris & even <sup>the</sup> London libraries. Still if you have some interesting communication to make on the above subject you will oblige me greatly by favoring me with it

I take the liberty of adding my address in Paris: 132, rue d'Assas.

Yours very sincerely

M. Ostrogorsky