

October 31, 1934

Dear Mr. Hines:

I found your note of October 27th when I came in from the dinner last night.

I would like to talk with you sometime about the world over there and the way you see it. I understand, of course, how boys go to pieces when they have lost their jobs. So do we all, I take it, adults as well as youngsters.

I shall be glad to spend an evening at the Club some time this winter, but it will have to be after the holidays, however.

I have been promising myself to squeeze out a little contribution and here it is. I am so sorry it is not more.

Faithfully yours
