Dear Mrs. Sale:

It was kind of you to write me about Mr. Sale's plans. I should have been glad to have seen him before he went away but understand of course how busy he must have been.

The principal thing is that he goes off feeling confident about "He Knew Lincoln." I am quite sure that Mr. Klaw would never have signed his contract with me if he had not felt sure that he and Mr. Sale had a good chance of making a success of the play. Now all that we have to do is to wait and pray for good fortune.

Please give my kindest regards to Mr. Sale when you write. I am glad that you can go to him some times. It is a long separation for you both. I wish when you are in town some time you would call me up - Stuyvesant 6674 - and possibly we could arrange to go to lunch together.

Sincerely yours,

Mrs. Marie Sale,
