Dear Miss Tarbell:

I have heard of the approach of your eightieth birthday. May I take a bit of joy in sending you my warmest and friendliest greetings.

I have wanted to talk with you and had hoped that you might visit with us up at Westport. To further the idea of the Commonwealth of Industry I have been thinking seriously of starting a small publication to go to the first and second rank of the industrial brains of the country called "The Industrial Statesman" and through a process of friendly and sincere, yet constructive upbraiding, make them realize that the economic forces and political forces will not work together until each respects and understands their mutual responsibilities and that the ultimate destiny of both is the same.

With kindest regards,

Sincerely,
