Dear Miss Tarbell:

I understand about sixty manuscripts were saved as possible prize winners. Of these I have about thirty. The remainder you have. I held out of my lot about eight, I think, which are possible prize winners. Suppose I just keep a list of the ones I think of as possible prize winners and send my whole batch to you. If that seems well to you will you also return the batch you have read keeping the ones you think may be possible prize winners listed. Then the ones ~~you~~ have selected might be submitted to the third of the judges, Mr. Roosevelt. Does this strike you as a good way of proceeding?

Of course we will award the prize, regardless of how high an order of merit the stories reach. Miss Roseboro's judgment is that there are six or seven of quite high grade.

Cardially yours,

Miss Ida M. Tarbell,
