Dear Gerald Stanley Lee:

How pleased I was when I came back the other day from the country and found your note.

I have known about your "new profession" and know there is something in it. I wonder if you and Mrs. Lee could drop in to the National Arts Club on Friday about four thirty and we could have a visit? I should like very much to see you both.

Of course I was gratified that you think there was signs of human thinking in that Lincoln review of mine in The Times. It was one Lincoln book I did not relish heartily.

Looking forward to seeing you both, believe me

Very sincerely
