

The Bookman.

"I am a Bookman."—JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL.

A Monthly Literary Journal.

AMERICAN EDITORS: { PROF. HARRY THURSTON PECK, Ph.D., Litt.D.
of Columbia University, N. Y.
JAMES MACARTHUR.

149-151 FIFTH AVENUE,

ENGLISH EDITOR: W. ROBERTSON NICOLL, M.A., LL.D.

PUBLISHED BY DODD, MEAD AND COMPANY.

NEW YORK, November 17, 189 7

Miss Ida M. Tarbell,
28 West 17th Street, N.Y.

Dear Miss Tarbell:-

Thank you for calling my attention to the book entitled "Contemporary American Opinions of the French Revolution" which, as requested by you, I return with this letter. I agree with you that an interesting review could be made out of the book, and further that few could perhaps make it so interesting as yourself. Won't you let me have about a thousand words on the subject? I think that that would be enough. I am in no particular hurry to have it for the next number, as my supply of reviews is well in advance of the space at my command. But you might send it to me within a month. I should not like to use it later than the February number coming out the 25th of January.

Again thanking you for your courtesy in calling my attention to the book, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

James MacArthur

(H)