

Memorandum.

Mr. Tracy tells me that he has always been a Republican, but was so disgusted this year at the turn things had taken that he decided not to vote. Then he read Wilson's Lincoln address which he admired enormously. He said that he decided that any man that could write it, particularly the last paragraph, was fit to be President of the United States; and wrote Wilson of his reason for voting for him.