My dear Miss Tucker:

I sincerely regret the long delay in replying to your letter in regard to your two Lincoln relics. I have not been well and away from New York a great deal with the result that my correspondence has been greatly neglected.

Now as to your question where I think the pieces should go. They should go, of course, to a collector who is interested in them. To begin with you should have a careful description and photographs if possible made of the mask, and the information about the pieces that you can gather attached. This information then should be turned over to those who collect Lincoln material. The best addresses I can give you are listed below.

When the descriptive material is prepared if you would care to send me a copy I will pass it on to anyone I think might be interested.

Apologizing again for my long delay in replying to your letter, believe me

Very truly yours
