Mr. John B. Weber,
Lackawanna, N.Y.

My dear Mr. Weber:

The Editor of the Buffalo News has sent me your recent letter to him, calling attention to a couple of slips that I made in one of my recent articles.

The misspelling of Wilmet was not my fault. That was one of those provoking things that happen in this kind of work between the time the manuscript leaves the author and finds its way into the newspaper. I am at fault, however, in the matter of the exact place in the hotel where Colonel Ellsworth was killed, and you are right. It is impossible in articles of this kind to go much into detail, and all I had in mind to say was that Ellsworth was killed in his effort to get the flag down, but my detail as to the exact place was certainly wrong. Thank you very much for calling my attention to the matter. I am always glad to be corrected.

Very truly yours,

Connelton
