My dear Miss Tarbell:

Two years ago I came to New York University to finish my graduate work and write the history of the Van Hornesville School. Mr. Young is anxious to have the story developed further than a thesis and published in book form. He is going to write the preface.

I have the outline finished and the writing pretty well along but I would feel more comfortable about the whole matter if I could have a little visit with you before I attempt to complete it.

I feel rather hesitant about asking you for this privilege, but I know you are interested in the program which Mr. Young sponsored. I feel that your advice would be very helpful.

Sincerely yours,

Maurice S. Hammond
