Booth manuscript. J. M. R

Dear Miss Tarbell

I saw Will Mackey in Franklin and asked him if he did not really know where Laura Keen's clothes were. He said that he had thought Lou had the trunk and Lou had thought he had it - but now they both felt that a family who lived west door had who had moved to Texas had the trunk and knew the value of it.
They had written them but had received no answer. But they both felt that they had them and knew the value -

I read the "Mad Booths of Maryland" here and it gives a good deal of Laura Keen in it - also mentions the Kennedy's oil and it seemed to me filled in wood & the time waste and apine - But there is a trip to New York which might allow a day or two in Franklin in the spring.

Meta Anderson says you are not in New York - or I would have gone to see you.
Perhaps you are much better - I would like to have seen you again.

I have been here a week with Meta and she has straightened me out a great deal as she always has - accuses me of childishness. But I think it was just being too poor too long and being in debt which held me in prison. You will be glad to know I am sure - that some of and others all paid - and I have a nice feeling of freedom and renewal that I have not had in five years -
