Dear Mr. Alloway:

How kind of you to quote in your column this handsome paragraph from Ambassador Herrick's letter to Mr. Connor. Of course I am much set up by the facts it gives and shall treasure it among my archives and pass it on to my nephews and neices, none of whom have any too great regard for their Aunt's productions. I wonder if Lindbergh did get a copy and if as Mr. Herrick suggests he liked it.

I have seen Mr. Wiggin and his daughter since I saw you - liked them both. Sometime later in the year when you are back in New York and I am not quite so busy I would like to talk to you about Jay Gould, and the Moore brothers. What does your "Bye the Bye," its files I mean have to offer about those entertaining pirates. Anything to prove that they were not as piratical as supposed?

I hope the summer has been a comfortable one for you.

Very sincerely yours

Mr. Henry Alloway
