Dear Mr. Case:

I have just come back from an enforced holiday at Atlantic City and find waiting me your letter of March 14th and the copies of letters which came to Mr. Young from readers of my articles in the American Magazine, as well as from the readers of the St. Lawrence address as published in the daily press.

Thank you both for the letter and the enclosures. I am sorry there has been so long a delay and particularly sorry that I am not yet quite in shape to take up work again. I am off now for ten days or two weeks in the country and hope it will finish my "cure."

I have looked over the letters you sent. They are mighty interesting. When I see you I want to ask you what you did with them. Did they all get answered? If so, there ought to be some valuable material in those answers.

I am particularly interested in your suggestion that I go down town someday and read the official transcript of Mr. Young's testimony in the Insull matters before the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency. I am thoroughly clear in my own mind - of course you know that - that Mr. Young's relation with the whole matter was inevitable under the circumstances and I am sure the testimony would only straighten that conclusion.

I have not seen the Hearst's editorial, but I am sending out for it.

When I get back and am settled in my stride I shall ask you to let me come down, read the testimony, and give me a chance to talk it over with you.

I hope Josephine and the baby are both well and that I am going to be able to see them and you before so very long.

Faithfully yours

Mr. Everitt Case
