

Second Section:

The complaint that Pearl Buck brings against us in the Harper /article, the basis of this is, that in spite of all this about American women is that gathered from the representation that the intelligent and hopeful women have made of themselves.
They can go to college; they can practice law; they have the vote; they can hold office. Now what must that mean to the idealist wanting to free herself? That is we have a nation of women free from feminine weaknesses of all sorts, companions and partners of men. And what does Mrs. Buck find when she looks us in the face?

Testify her complaint.

I would like to add some to my own. Mrs. Buck uses the same technique that I have been using in regard to politics. She blames it on the men. It is an easy alibi for not using your own good sense.

Very much from education