Dear Mr. Latham:

I have been looking over the introduction to "He Knew Lincoln, and Other Billit Brown Stories" and it has struck me that with a little revision I might use it as an article in possibly The New Republic. Would you think this wise? If it were published the week of Lincoln's birthday, would it interfere with the book, in case you do not object to its appearing. If you do not object, will you not ask the office to send me extra proofs that I may submit it.

A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to you.

Very sincerely yours,
