My dear Col. Scott:

Thank you heartily for your satisfactory letter of September 28. It is a relief to know that you find my handling of Judge Gary's work in the War satisfactory. I do not want to over-stress the part, but I think the facts justified the emphasis that I have placed on his work. Possibly I was a little more anxious to emphasize it because of Mr. Baruch's outbreak a few months ago.

I was glad of the opportunity also to say a word as to the contribution to order that you made in that terrific confusion.

I am glad of the corrections you made. I should have been sorry to have set Mr. Denman down as a member of the General Munitions Board. I did not want to use his name but the story is too good, too illustrative of what I know myself went on, to pass up.

I am pleased that you think the thing is going pretty well: it has been a heavy task. I turned the last chapter over to Appleton yesterday, and for the first time in months felt that I could draw a comparatively free breath.

With kindest regards to Mrs. Scott and yourself, believe me

Very sincerely yours
