Dear Miss Tarbell:

I have been tremendously interested in your articles in McCall's, a magazine in which you may know I am considerably interested. I have recently given up my personal activities, but am still a director and large stockholder. I am also interested in Popular Science Monthly and for the past five years have been President of The Periodical Publishers Association of America. Just now I am taking a much needed rest, and Mrs. Wilson and I are going abroad on the 12th of February on the Empress of France, and will be in Naples the first week in April for a stay in Italy of about two or three weeks. I wonder if I could "Penetrate the labyrinths of Italian Officialdom" and get an opportunity to meet Mussolini.

It is difficult to realize that seventeen years have elapsed since the old American days, and in all those years our paths have never crossed. I have of course followed you in the press, and I know your spirit is unchanged and I trust your health is equally good.

With every good wish, believe me,

Yours very sincerely,

Robert Cade Wilson
