

May 13, 1927.

Miss Mary E. Dillon,
Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce,
Cort Street,
Brooklyn, New York.

My dear Miss Dillon:

When I had the pleasure of seeing you at the recent dinner of the women of the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce, we talked a little, you will perhaps remember, of your work and you said you would be willing to see me some day if I would come to your office. I should like nothing better than a chance to learn a little more of your work and of how you came into it. As you may know, I have for many years been an observer and an occasional commentator on the work of women in our industrial life. I have been particularly interested lately in the women who seem to be coming in considerable numbers into the higher functions of industry. It would, I am sure, be a helpful thing to me in my studies if you are willing to talk with me. I could come to you Monday, though I should have to be back in New York by four P.M., or at any time Tuesday or Wednesday. The latter part of the week I am engaged. If this is inconvenient for you, perhaps you could see me the week after.

Trusting that I am not imposing upon your kindness, believe me, my dear Miss Dillon,

Very sincerely,

INT BAK.
