New York, N.Y.

Dear Miss Tarbell:

In writing to you several days ago I forgot to inclose copies of my letter to Judge Gary of June 16 and of his note in reply of June 18, which I had intended to send you and which I inclose with this letter.

I add that the sentiment embodied in my letter to him, that lives of great merit of men in the ordinary business of life have a special value in the training of the youth and are particularly valuable to the community in general, and should be more generally recognized as such.

It occurs to me that this sentiment in a measure, if true, supports the call for your articles being embodied in book form and issued for general circulation.

Cordially yours,

Inclosures
