Dear Mr. Latham:

I recently had an application from a gentleman who has a concession in what is known as the Lincoln Center at the Chicago Exposition for permission to present "He Knew Lincoln" in a sketch which he proposes to arrange. There is nothing in his proposal and it has been declined. But connected with his proposal was something which possibly might have something in it, not for him, but for the Center, itself. He wanted to get a cheap edition of "He Knew Lincoln" to use with his proposed sketch. Now it might be worth while to have your Chicago representative look into the Lincoln Center at the Exposition and see what books they are offering there and whether or not "He Knew Lincoln" could go into the list. I have been surprised at the interest the people took at that corner of the Exposition and the way they picked up the souvenirs offered. You will know whether there is anything in this suggestion and that I am just passing it on for what it is worth.

Very sincerely
